Roll over

Res-Q Towing worked to get an SUV out of the ditch on RR 2.5, just about 2 kms south of the Westcott Rd. Monday afternoon. The car left the road and rolled into the ditch. Didsbury RCMP and Fire Dept. responded to the call along with Mountain View EMS. The four people in the vehicle were all wearing their seat belts, and also escaped with minor injuries.

Early Sunday morning, at approximately 2:10 a.m. the Didsbury RCMP were called to an alley just south of 18 Ave., where a 16 year old girl was stabbed, and people were just fleeing the scene.

"We had some members who were very close by, they were there within minutes so people were just fleeing the scene," said Didsbury Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer.

Mountain View EMS also responded to the call, and the 16 year old youth, who can not be named, was transported to the Foothills Hospital in Calgary.

Didsbury RCMP, with the assistance of Olds RCMP have arrested both a male and female suspect with the stabbing, with more suspects expected.

"More suspects have come to light, including two adults and the rest are youth. I don't have the file in front of me but I believe both adult suspects are in their early thirties," said Sgt. O'Dwyer. "We can not release the names of any suspects right now, the situation is still under investigation and so far no charges have been laid."

The victim remains in stable condition and is expected to fully recover. The matter remains under investigation with the assistance of Red Deer RCMP General Investigation Section, along with the Red Deer Forensic Investigation Section.

Downtown Didsbury gets more parking

by Tamara Collins

Things are clearing up for downtown business owners, employees and customers with the increase in parking spaces on Didsbury's main drag.

At the last Town Council meeting, council approved the expansion of the parking lot located at Eldon Foote Hall, known to many as the 'gazebo parking lot', both east and south. Stage one of the project is already complete, adding an additional eight spots to the lot.

"We are still going to fence the east side and we need to put up some signage," said Robert Wigg, Town Planning and Development officer. "The lot will be one way, with all traffic heading south. To do that we had to open it up, and lost two parking stalls, but we added 10 more, so really we have gained eight stalls."

The parking lot will now include stalls for small cars only, which helped make more stalls available. The lot will now also include some parallel stalls.

"In the short term there may be room for even more parking, but then people may end up going onto CPR's (Canadian Pacific Railway) land," said Wigg.

The decision to expand the lot was made carefully by council, considering possible future plans for the land.

"This expansion will have no negative impact on future plans," said Wigg. "We have always planned on upgrading the lot, the results of the parking study just reinforced the need. It helped council make the decision to spend the money."

The project, once complete, will cost the Town approximately $13,000.

by Tamara Collins

The concern is growing from Didsbury residents, as we lose another doctor, bringing the count down to only two left in town, and one in Carstairs.

In objection to the decrease of permanent physicians, the latest loss being Dr. Puts, local residents have started a petition asking the Calgary Health Region (CHR) to find out why our town is struggling with losing doctors, and asks them to work with them to provide solutions to the community's growing needs. According to the CHR though, there is no need to worry.

"Dr. Puts is leaving Didsbury, but we still have three permanent physicians rostered on rotation, there are no holes in our rotation, everything is covered," said Linda Foley, CHR Senior management of Rural North area. "We are also working hard to actively recruit physicians to the area, and in the mean time we have others to help fill in."

The recruitment of new doctors can be a short or lengthy process, depending on where they are coming from, according to Foley.

"If they need to be relocated that could take longer," said Foley.

The Region also confirmed they will not bring obstetrics care back to the hospital till they have full recruitment.

"We made a commitment that acute care will stay open in Didsbury," said Foley. "It is very important for the rural community and the five areas it serves. You have nothing but the full commitment of the Region that acute care will remain."

Man who attacked senior offers apology

by Dan Singleton

A 49-year-old man who attacked 92-year-old Alyce Francis in her Carstairs home in March 2004, causing the former school teacher permanent physical injuries, has offered an apology to the woman.

Kenneth Ross Bell, 49, of Rolling Hills, pleaded guilty on April 4 to a charge of aggravated assault. His sentencing hearing resumed in Didsbury provincial court Tuesday.

"I would just like to apologize to Alyce, the community, my family and my friends," Bell told Judge Frank Maloney.

Bell admitted earlier that he grabbed Francis, carried her upside down a short distance, and then dropped her on her head March 3, 2004. She suffered severe neck and back injuries.

Francis had invited Bell and his twin brother Stuart, both of whom she taught in the 1960s, into her home and served them cake and hot chocolate prior to the attack.

Reached at her home Tuesday and told of Bell's apology, Francis said, "I'm not surprised he apologized. I have no other thoughts than that."

The Crown is asking for a four year prison term for Bell, a rancher and oilfield consultant. Defence lawyer Steve Wojick is asking for a conditional sentence, essentially a jail term served in the community.

During Tuesday's court session, Wojick said his client can offer no reason for the attack.

"At the end of the day there is no explanation as to why Mr. Bell did this terrible thing to Mrs. Francis. He's deeply distressed that she was hurt," said Wojick.

Bell is not a threat to the community and is a good candidate for rehabilitation in the community, Wojick told Judge Maloney.

"He's done something that appears to be something completely out of character," he said.

In his sentencing submissions last month, prosecutor George Combe said the fact Bell offered no assistance to the victim following the attack is an aggravating factor.

The attack is one of the worst cases of aggravated assault he has ever seen, Combe said following court Tuesday.

"It is as bad as it gets because a 92-year-old lady had been free to enjoy her quality of life and now to be wearing a back brace and not enjoying whatever she has left in life is worse than I can ever imagine," said Combe.

"The quality of her life has dramatically gone down, and what she enjoyed before she can't get back."

The attack may have stemmed from a belief on the part of the accused that the victim's husband, Reg, was conspiring against him in some way, said Combe.

"All I know from viewing the file and from experts is that Ken Bell and his brother had certain ideas about conspiracies in the area and Mrs. Francis was no part of that conspiracy," said Combe.

Francis says the attack has left her in constant pain, severely restricted her mobility and left her apprehensive and fearful.

"It has changed my way of living completely," said Francis.

During Monday's court session, forensic psychologist Griff Thomas, with Calgary Health Region, testified Bell suffers from mistaken beliefs but not a mental disorder.

Judge Maloney adjourned Bell's sentencing hearing until Sept. 13. Aggravated assault carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in jail.

In January, Stuart Bell was found not criminally responsible in the attack on Francis on account of mental disorder.

Cat traps

TAMARA COLLINS
EDITORIAL

I was driving the other day when I noticed a cat trap laying on someone's lawn, and this made me very upset. I feel no one has the right to capture a creature, and ship it off to a strange place.

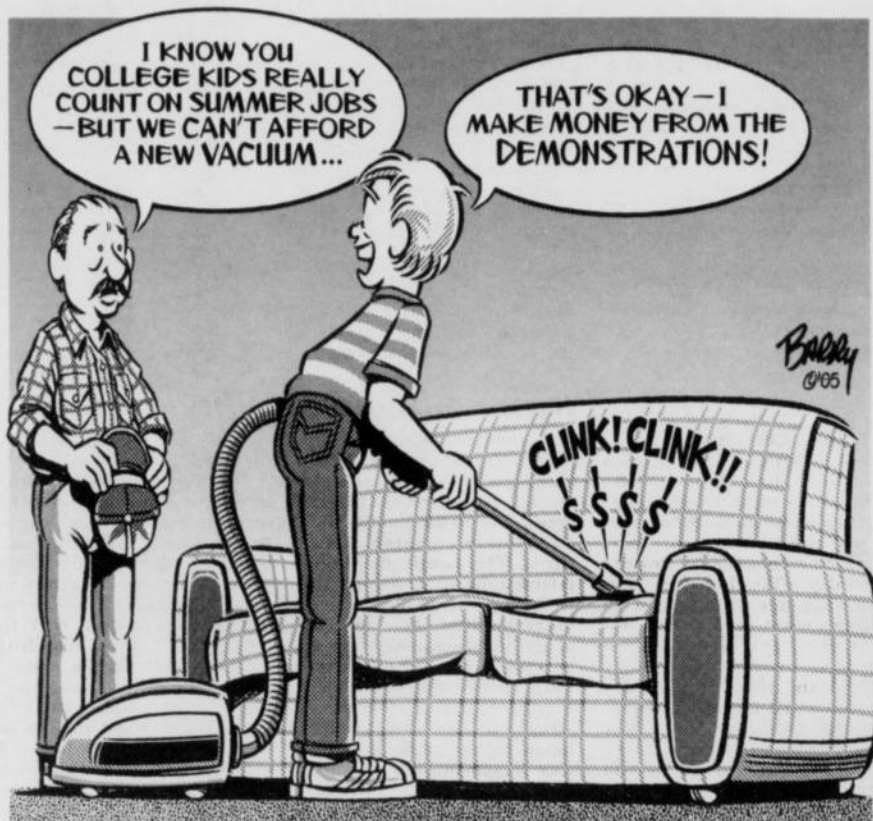

Almost everyday when I walk around Didsbury, I see signs up for lost cats, in fact we have two in our window right now. These poor people are out searching for their lost pets, they love so much, and here it is possible that someone trapped them and sent them away somewhere, how sad!

Didsbury does not have a cat bylaw, so I am wondering what gives someone the right to put out such a trap. Are they allowed to put out traps to capture wild birds, deer, rabbits, and other free roaming animals.

Many of these cats are not homeless, but people who let their cats out to play, and the ones who are stray, well how can you be sure?

I understand people get frustrated with cats digging in their garden, but guess what, that is the risk you take in having a garden. It is a cat's natural instinct to dig in dirt, and why should we have the right to get upset over this. People and animals share this planet, so I think instead of people always trying to change what animals were born to do, people need to consider these things when deciding to have a garden. If we were to lose these creatures, it would take a lot of the beauty away that our town naturally possesses.

MYRON THOMPSON'S COLUMN

Thompson cautiously optimistic in wake of ruling

Myron Thompson, Member of Parliament for Wild rose, was encouraged this week to see Canadian cattle cross into the United States for the first time since the border closed two years ago.

"While this decision by the court to re-open the border is certainly great news for producers, we are painfully aware of how hard the battle has been and of the challenges that lie before us," Stated Thompson.

On Thursday, July 14, 2005 the U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals stayed the preliminary injunction obtained by the protectionist group Ranchers Cattleman Action Legal Fund or R-Calf.

According to Thompson, this verdict "exposes the voodoo 'science' and protectionist rhetoric that was used to hide R-Calf's self serving agenda."

"This closure has been difficult for everyone, and we can only hope that this ruling means it is over. However, we must be very careful that we don't lose the progress that has been made over the past few years, in terms of expanding slaughter house capabilities and making the Canadian industry self sufficient. We have to continue down this road."

However, Thompson is quick to note that while this ruling is great news for the ranching community, Canada's producers are not out of the woods yet.

On July 27, 2005 Judge Cebull, the same judge who granted the R-Calf stay, will hear arguments in the Montana court case and could impose a permanent injunction on the importation of Canadian Beef.

"This court case could very well decide the future of the Beef industry in Canada, and I am extremely proud to be joining a contingent of over seventy Conservative Parliamentarians as we represent Canadian ranchers with our amicus status," stated Thompson.

"Unfortunately, even though the Agriculture Minister acknowledges the gravity of this court case, the Liberal government will not have anyone in the courtroom to represent the Canadian producers," he continued.

"I am very hopeful that Judge Cebull will recognize the facts and science that are presented to him on the twenty seventh, and keep the border open. I simply hope that this decision is one based upon reason and scientific evidence. If that is the case then I know this decision will be favourable for our producers," he concluded.

"Dealing With Life"

Have we noticed that when a situation or problem arises in our lives, and for one reason or another we fail to fully deal with it, that similar situations "experiences" continue to come into our lives over and over again, until finally we are willing to face up to the issues confronting us, and deal with them.

The same is true when we meet people to whom we are not attracted, or who appear to have a negative effect on us (often the short-comings I observe in others, are the shortcomings I myself possess).

Again - until we learn to adapt and adjust to these kinds of people - the same type of folk will continue to come into our lives again and again, until we master our feelings and bring issues to a closure.

In all likelihood we have all experienced that when we take the time to be with and get to know other people, and come to understand them, and what makes them say and do the things they do, it becomes so much easier to accept, respect and love them.

Didsbury down to two doctors

Dear Editor,

You may have noticed a petition has been circulated around town regarding the loss of another doctor. Our frustration is that as a town we have not been able to find and especially retain more doctors.

Drumheller with basically the same district population has 13 doctors and as of this Thursday we will only have 2.

A survey shows that 37% of emergency care at Didsbury Hospital is from the Calgary and Airdrie areas, so we certainly provide an essential service. People from Calgary and Airdrie come to our hospital because it is usually much quicker to drive out to Didsbury, be seen by a doctor and drive home again.

70% of our community goes elsewhere for their health care needs. Consider this: with every trip outside of Didsbury for these needs how many dollars are leaving with it? This may never change but we need to be mindful of how wide open the door is. Make no mistake, this is an issue that should concern everyone in our town/district.

As our population grows it is more important than ever to retain and enhance our health care services.

The main purpose of our petition is to ask Dr. Val Congdon and the Calgary Health Region to find out why Didsbury Hospital is still struggling so much with this issue.

Compatible doctors are difficult to find and when we do find them, we want them to stay, so why aren't they? We hope that CHR hears this plea for help. Regardless of whether or not your doctor is still here, losing another doctor will affect us all. If we don't attract another doctor soon, it will affect our active hospital and town in the future.

If you are interested in doing more than signing this pe-tion you can write letters and send them directly to Dr. Val Congdon, Department of Rural Medicine, 11 Cimarron Common, Okotoks, AB, T1S 2E9.

Please find and sign a petition near you. Thank you for your support.

Sincerely,
Val Puttick

Flood trauma in our County

Dear Editor,

Our municipal ability to help people who have been traumatized by this flood is sorely in need of intense review and training.

I was in several houses the day after the flood. Disgusting does not begin to cover what was there because of the flood. These houses are normally very clean and tidy. On that day some were pumping water out but to no avail as it kept recycling through due to the intense saturation of the ground. The government assessor deemed one particular house to be repairable, even though the mould has taken over, plus they would pay only a small portion. The mother does not feel that this would be a solution as she would never feel safety for her child. The child's bedroom was in the basement. Because this family owns the property and a very nice property at that, they could put a mobile on this lot and flood proof it to live safely and securely. Why do we not get them to this stage as they already identified how.

It behooves planning and development in the municipality to get in touch with the government assessor, and visa versa, regarding the type of rebuilding that we will permit on that property ...i.e. no basements plus adequately elevated structures. The family has identified how and where for there next step, but government hinders them instead of aiding them...We have to get our acts together. Let's help these people and the many others in the same situation. We seem to road block rather than pave our way to serving our people.

Alberta has 5 Billion extra...and with the oil and gas this keeps coming in. My theory on people hit by disaster is that if they are not given help to begin again at the point the disaster took them down, they will never catch up. This not only affects them, but it affects entire communities emotionally, financially, and economically, municipally and provincially. The expenses today leave little room for disaster management by individuals. Small business in the heart of rural Alberta struggle at best, but, with a disaster of this magnitude, those struck are in states of depression, stress, and total fatigue....Economic development suffers. Jobs are lost for ever.

I have asked that Planning and Development contact the government assessor who spoke with the family and look into this situation, and work together in what options could be given. There is always a way to agree to a solution...but there also has to be middle ground. I would hope that we can do something for these people and others so they can get into a home. I also hope that this be dealt with in a manner not to create hostility and or non-compliance. Maybe we can lessen the burden of permits in some way AND EXPEDITE. I would also ask the provincial government to do the honorable and help generously to re-establish those people with limited funds into a safe and secure home. Small businesses and farmers should also receive a degree of assistance...both financially and technically. I really do not think that people (voters) will disapprove if more rather than less is forwarded to the stricken.

Does Didsbury need an out of school care program?

by Tamara Collins

The question has been asked, and now it is up to those who want to, to speak up.

It has been almost five years since Didsbury had an out of school program, otherwise known as a before and after school program. The number of parents approaching the Town of Didsbury about having another such program is increasing, so in May the Town held a public meeting about the issue.

"The meeting had very poor attendance," said Nicole Aasen, Town of Didsbury. "The people who were there decided that the best way to gauge people's reaction was with a survey. So one has been sent out with each water bill."

Didsbury FCSS in conjunction with Ross Ford School and other interested parties are responsible for conducting the survey, this is not a Town project, it would require its own society if it is decided it is needed.

"If the survey results show a need for the program, a group would be formed of parents, and that group would be responsible for garnering funding for the program," said Aasen. "A coordinator would then need to be hired for the program."

The program would be geared toward children between the ages of six and 12, and would run from 6:30 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. and then again from 3:30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

"The purpose of the program would be to fill the void when parents are not home, to avoid children being left home alone," said Aasen. If those parents who need this program do not respond, the issue will be dropped. You must have your completed survey into the Town Office by Aug. 15, 2005. You can drop it off at the Town, or put it in their slot if they are closed. Faxing or emailing the survey is also okay, information for both is available on the survey.

"A lot of parents work out of town, so they leave early and get home late," said Aasen. "This program would meet the needs of a lot of parents in the community."

TALK FROM TURKEY Greeting from Turkey

Dear Family and Friends,

Part I: Greetings from Turkey, and Troy. Today we left Istanbul by about 7 a.m. and went to Gallipoli which was where many people died during World War I. We saw the beach where the Australian and New Zealand troops landed and the steep hills they had to climb. It was suicidal and the military leaders who ordered the invasion were very unwise. During the nine months of battle about 500,000 people died and at the end nothing had been accomplished. What a waste!!

Tomorrow we go to the ancient city of Troy and see the ruins and hear the story. We crossed from Asia into Europe and back into Asia as we traveled today. The two continents meet at the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles around the Sea of Marmara. It has been very interesting and thought-provoking.

We enjoy traveling but sometimes the hotel rooms have been quite small. The one for tonight seems pretty good.

Part II: Greetings from Sofia, Bulgaria! Last time I wrote you we had just visited the site of a horrible battle in World War I at Gallipoli. The next day we saw the ruins of Troy, the nine layers of city that were built on that site. It was good. We went back to Istanbul that night and spent a couple of days shopping and resting.

Then we took the overnight bus to Sofia. We got in fairly early in the morning and took two taxis (we have too much luggage!!) from the bus station to the apartment that we had arranged to rent.

We got there but couldn't get in. We were standing outside the building with a copy of the reservation in our hand when a lady came along and asked if she could help us. We explained about our reservation for the apartment. She phoned the number of the agency through whom we had worked.

After just a short conversation she became quite animated—she was doing all of this in Bulgarian, of which we speak not even one word! It turns out that the agency said that the reservation had been cancelled. The lady who helped us told them that they were snakes—or something similar.

We definitely were not impressed with the agency, but we were very impressed with how helpful this lady was. Here she was at 8 a.m. on her way to work. She had just bought a cup of coffee and it was getting cold while she helped us, total strangers on the street—quite a God-send. She took us to a hotel nearby and then she had to get to work. We are very grateful for her help.

The lady at reception at the hotel took up where the other lady left off. She offered us breakfast, which we ate with thanks, while she found us another hotel—she didn't have a room for us that night. Again we were impressed with how helpful these ladies were for total strangers on the street. Maybe we just looked pretty pathetic. God looked after us, and these ladies were His instruments.

We ended up at this hotel which is two blocks from the largest fruit and vegetable market in Sofia. It is also two blocks from a small mall with a food court, and three blocks from MacDonalds. We've enjoyed exploring Sofia and seeing another city and culture.

Sincerely,

Dan for the Snyders

At The Kitchen Table

by Noreen Olson

I am typing this in a state of nervous apprehension. It has been a bad week for the electronic age as it applies to our house, and I am half expecting the computer to freeze up and reject any plans I have for it.

How I loathe those nasty little signs it flashes on the screen... "The server library has experienced an outage of memory error please try to reconnect". What do you suppose that means in English? And then, "The servers certificate has an invalid signature, you will not be able to connect to the site securely." Whose fault is that and what does it have to do with me? Worst of all is, "You have performed an illegal operation and the program will be shut down." What ever happened to innocent until proven guilty? I have not done anything illegal and how dare you shut me down. But she who argues with a computer screen argues futilely and screaming doesn't help either.

Our problems began with my fruitless attempt to get some help from the 2005 Alberta Centennial via their website. The Scandinavian Coffee Party came and went and nothing ever showed up. Next was a problem with the dryer. It spun and hummed and sounded efficient but there was no heat in it and a load of towels in a cold dryer stays damp for a really long time. The repairman was prompt, charming and reassuring. He replaced a solenoid, whatever that is, and stayed for coffee but there was still no heat in the dryer. On his second trip he was equally charming and reassuring but there was still no heat in the dryer. By his third trip I was beginning to lose faith but the problem was finally solved and once again we are grateful to have dry towels and blue jeans.

I think the power failure came next. It lasted for about three hours and seemed to affect only this small side road. All around us and quite close by, we could see lights but none here. We are assuming that some poor bird met an untimely death by electrocution. Often a young owl is the victim. At this time of year they are not yet flying perfectly and when landing on a power line an errant wing touches a neighboring line and the owl, as conductor, doesn't stand a chance.

Then the phone went funny. A terrible roar accompanied every outgoing call and no amount of shouting helped. Incoming calls were signaled by one very short ring then the connection was cut. We managed to get through to report our problem and whatever it was they fixed it from some central location. I think it was the next day that I turned our new barbecue too high and ruined the hamburgers, the clock died and the TV screen went flat and green during the Chuckwagon races.

"I would like to clean the oven" I told my husband, "but the way things are going I'm afraid the self cleaning mechanism will jam and I will incinerate the kitchen." "I know the feeling," he replied, "I'm reluctant to drive the car because I'm expecting a problem." "Do you happen to know where the instructions for the cell phone are?" I asked him. "Yes," he said, "they are in the filing cabinet in the office, what do you need them for?" "The phone is set on vibrate," I confessed, "I have no idea how I did it and I don't know how to put it back on ring."

Meanwhile the computer refused to find the Star Choice Bill, takes up to 3 minutes to send a simple email and offers me incomprehensible messages about site security and illegal operations. Will I be able to send this via email to the Review or will I be hand delivering it early Monday morning? The Electronic age is fraught with peril!

ON THIS DAY...

DIDSBURY MUSEUM & HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Introducing...
Katherine Ahlf

Hi, I'm Katherine and I am the new face at the Didsbury Museum and for this column. Ever since I was little, history has fascinated me, and currently I am working on a BA in History.

Working at the museum, I have discovered many interesting things about our town's history, from tragic to hilarious. Our collection of Didsbury newspapers from 1907-1990 on microfilm has all sorts of interesting happenings in it. I recently refinished our bathroom walls with copies of some very entertaining advertisements found in the paper from 1907-1925.

Glenda and I have been working on several new displays, including one on local Women's Institutes and another on the early settlers to Didsbury. We are always updating our old displays, so don't think if you've seen it once, you've seen it all!! It's a great place to bring out of town guests too.

If you have any questions, suggestions for future columns, or would like to volunteer, please contact us. Call 335-9295, e-mail ddhs@telusplanet.net or stop by and visit. This summer, we are open 12:30-4:30 Tuesday to Thursday, and Saturdays.

Centennial celebrations come back to town

by Tamara Collins

Didsbury residents have been in fear that they would not see any further Centennial celebrations after the Town's Centennial Planning Committee fell through, but the Town has pulled through and planned a big Centennial weekend filled with celebrations and activities.

"We will have lots of activities for kids, it will be similar to Canada Day, a set schedule will be mailed out to all Didsbury residents. We just felt Didsbury deserved to have a big Centennial event and it would be terrible to let the year go by without marking the occasion somehow."

- Nicole Aasen,
Town of Didsbury

The weekend of events will go from Sept. 16 to 18, starting the Friday night with a Family Dance at the Curling Rink. The dance will go from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. and a concession will be on site.

"This is a Homecoming type event for all the residents of Didsbury, past and present," said Nicole Aasen, organizer.

Saturday's events will start off with a Community Pancake Breakfast in the MPR from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m., which will be followed with a parade down Main St. at 11 a.m. Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m. Didsbury will feature its very own Didsbury Idol in the MPR.

"We are hoping to get out the age groups that tend to stay away," said Aasen. "The competition will be open for 12 to 25 year olds. They all must pre-audition, and the top ten will be in the competition. There will be prizes for the winner."

While Didsbury Idol is going on, for those who are not interested in watching, they have the option to attend a Community Tea at Eldon Foote Hall from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Saturday night everyone ages 18 and over are invited to a cabaret at the Curling Rink starting at 9 p.m.

"Friday night is for the families and Saturday night is adults only," said Aasen.

Sunday morning a special Community Church Service will be held in the MPR at 9 a.m., which will be interdenominational. Following the Service a Community Picnic will start up in Memorial Park at 11 a.m.

"We will have lots of activities for kids, it will be similar to Canada Day," said Aasen. "A set schedule will be mailed out to all Didsbury residents. We just felt Didsbury deserved to have a big Centennial event and it would be terrible to let the year go by without marking the occasion somehow."

The Town is now looking for community groups to come forward and organize the family dance and the cabaret.

If you are interested you can contact Nicole at 335-3391. You can also contact Nicole if you would like to book a spot in the parade, or if you would like to set up an audition for Didsbury Idol.

"We really encourage everyone to participate," said Aasen. "This opportunity won't come around for another 100 years."

The search is on for Didsbury's Next Top Model

by Tamara Collins

Do you have what it takes to be a top model? If you think so, a once in a lifetime opportunity is being offered to Didsbury residents. The search is on for aspiring models for Canada's Next Top Model competition, and organizers are looking for someone to represent Didsbury.

"The local winner will be invited to the National Finals where they will see and be seen by top agents, managers and casting directors while learning about the modeling industry in a safe, fun, and family friendly environment," said Julie Young-Marcellin, director. "Contestants have the chance to make new friends from around the country while competing for prizes and awards."

Canada's Next Top Model offers participants opportunities for agent access, networking, exposure, and education. The fact that the competition is open to children, teens, adults, both male and female, makes this competition unique.

Canada's Child Model of the Year is open to children ages 4-8, Junior Model from 9-12, Teen Model from 13-17, and Canada's Adult Model of the Year is open to those 18 and over. The areas of competition will consist of four equally weighted categories: Photogenic (25%), Runway (25%), Fashion Wear (25%), and Spokesperson (25%).

"Optional competitions are offered in Portfolio, Monologue, Swimsuit, and TV Commercial. Children, teens, and adults from beginners to professionals, perform for top scouts, industry leaders that new talent might never get to see under normal circumstances," said Young-Marcellin. "Years worth of auditions are condensed into three days. The agents come to the participants making this competition economical, by saving thousands in traveling to see the agents themselves."

Canada's Next Top Model is led by a team of professionals with a combined expertise in the model, talent, and entertainment industries. The group also produces the Miss Teen Canada competition. The organization is responding to a need.

Parents want a safe environment to explore opportunities for their children.

"We bring reputable agents and scouts together, providing a positive learning atmosphere for parents to see what the industry is all about," said Young-Marcellin. "The competition is open to contestants with no previous modeling or stage experience."

Didsbury area finalists will be announced August 31st, 2005.

Didsbury Minor Hockey prepares for new season

Colin Northcott, Zac Overwater and Slater Ranson, all play Didsbury Minor Hockey

While the sun is still shining and summer seems like it is just getting under way, Didsbury Minor Hockey Association (DMHA) will be holding registration for all hockey players August 16, from 7-9 PM at the Multipurpose Room. The early registration is to accommodate new CAHL deadlines which require Minor Hockey teams and numbers to be registered in September. DMHA works hard to keep registration affordable for families and are able to accept payment in two instalments.

An Equipment Swap and sale/give away will also occur during the registration. While participants will be responsible for their own swap and sale items, it is anticipated that there will be a variety of low cost and free equipment available.

"We are hoping that these endeavours may entice some families into joining and trying out our Minor Hockey Program," said Jill Ransom, DMHA.

Hockey instills many positive life skills and contributes to the physical, emotional and social growth of young people. DMHA works hard to ensure that hockey can be affordable, fun, and skill building for all those involved. In the past, parents have had concerns regarding the costs and travel required in Minor Hockey. They want to ensure that parents realize that boys and girls who are just starting out in hockey have minimal travel. Tyke and Novice players (age 5-8) belong to the 2&27 league with a set team schedule of 10-12 games and travel typically under 45 minutes. Teams included in the 2&27 league include Carstairs, Olds, and Sundre, with Three Hills being the furthest travel location. Each team then decides what additional exhibition games or tournaments they want to be part of. While there is more of a travel requirement for older players, the 2&27 league is currently looking at trying to expand into further age categories. Meanwhile, Atom age players and above, just enjoy playing hockey, wherever that takes them.

"Amateur sport is a place that provides youngsters with an opportunity to grow and thrive as young people. Minor Hockey gives kids the opportunity to engage in healthy sport activity and to develop lifelong skills and fitness in the meantime. It is about participation and enjoying," said Ransom.

Didsbury Minor Hockey officially starts September 20, 2005 with a 2 week Power Skating/Conditioning Camp and generally runs till mid/end March. Kidsport Funding may also be available for families with lower incomes.

"It is a lot of fun," said Slater Ransom, who has been playing for five years. "It is rough and a team sport. You can really make some good friends playing hockey." The September Conditioning Camp will be free for all new hockey player registrations who have not registered with DMHA in the past.

Local business featured in magazine

If you are to come across a June/July issue of Electrical Business magazine, you will notice Erhard Hermann, of Erhard Electric featured within.

Two years ago, Hermann emailed them about an article they had in their magazine about small solar systems. At the time he received no reply, then a new editor started at the magazine and saw Hermann's old email and contacted him.

"He told me he wanted to do a story so we worked on one together," Hermann.

The story is about Hermann's experience with solar systems and the one they presently power their home with.

You can read the story at www.ebmag.com. The magazine goes to electrical contractors, distributors and engineers.

"People have called me with questions about it," said Hermann. "I think we are going to have a more reference type set up here. I am presently working with one of my wholesalers who have an industrial/national branch, and they have contacted me about working with them."

Hermann continues to try different things with solar power, and says he will keep us updated on anything new.

Didsbury's time capsule

The Town of Didsbury has just received a very special time capsule to help mark their anniversary. Over 200 municipalities throughout the province, have received microcapsules to collect timely historical items for inclusion in the larger official Alberta Centennial Time Capsule.

"This gives citizens, both young and old, the opportunity to lock away photos, newspapers, local information, stories, and other historically significant items that will tell future Albertans what was unique about your community," said Dorothy Moore, Didsbury mayor. "We would like items that reflect the times." Each microcapsule is 30" long and 5" in diameter and the contents can weigh a maximum of four pounds. If you don't think that's much, remember that thousands of documents and photographs can be saved on a single compact disc. You are also encouraged to label or decorate your microcapsule through engraving, stickers, small plaques, etc., as long as the diameter of the microcapsule is not increased by more than 1/4 inch.

The Time Capsule itself is a sight to behold. The huge rocket-shaped capsule looks and sounds futuristic in contrast to the original 1914 McLaughlin car that will accompany it across the province. Didsbury has the opportunity to view our capsule at the Centennial celebrations on Sept. 16 to 18.

All items for the capsule are to be submitted to the Town.

Horse spirits help heal souls

by Shawne Mohl

It's a proven fact that animals help heal people and can teach humans things that other humans cannot. And, it's this philosophy that one local woman is putting to work, to help troubled teenagers as well as help teach different corporate groups about such things as team building through horsemanship.

Sue McIntosh, a Certified Canadian Counsellor with a Masters Degree in Counselling Psychology, started Healing Hooves just north of Cremona, in 2000.

Healing Hooves offers Equine Facilitated Professional Development and Equine Facilitated Counselling services and programs.

"I am a therapist, but do it through horses," McIntosh explained simply.

McIntosh has always had a love for horses, and once she learned how to combine her passion for animals and the professional side to her life this is how Healing Hooves was born.

Prior to establishing Healing Hooves, McIntosh had 10 years of experience working for major management consulting firms most recently as senior manager with KPMG, who she still works with on a contract basis.

McIntosh's business is two-fold, as her two different types of counselling are completely unrelated, and have two different purposes.

The first type of counselling she does is the one that is most common, where she actually works with people to help with psychological problems. Some of her clients may have been abused or have a very low self-esteem for a number of different reasons.

Equine Facilitated Counselling the proper term for this type of treatment is a form of experiential Animal Assisted Therapy, and it incorporates interactions with specially selected and trained horses into the counselling setting and relationship.

My approach brings together aspects of many different fields which include Animal Assisted Therapy, therapeutic riding, person centered counselling, play therapy, experiential learning, and natural horsemanship," she said. "The result is a uniquely effective form of counselling, which draws upon the human animal bond to facilitate healing and growth through contact with horses."

McIntosh says that her results of often trying to figure out what exactly is bothering her client often becomes more clear, as they will tend to open up to her through the horse a lot easier, than in an office environment. "It's hard to just sit down in an office and talk to someone face to face to try to discuss their problems," she said. "They will often go for a walk with the horse, open up to them first and then eventually through different exercises will open up to me."

McIntosh says that, as a counsellor, in the past when she worked in an office setting she had troubles getting her clients to come back for more than one visit. However, since she started doing her counselling through horses, she says she has not had a single drop out.

They are more willing to come see me because of the horses," McIntosh said. "Also, it's not as intimidating to come and see me, because there is a horse for my clients to focus on." Every session is tailored to the specific needs and objectives of the individual client, so they vary greatly, McIntosh explained. "Much of the work done in a session is through metaphors. For example, for many of us the horse is a symbol of power. When working with a survivor of abuse this can provide a metaphor for how he/she feels with regards to the perpetrator of the abuse of the assault itself. Through various groundwork exercises, this client could work to regain his/her sense of personal power, control and boundaries in the presence of the horse, which can open the door to experiencing this in other relationships," McIntosh explained.

The second type of work which McIntosh does is corporate work, where she will work with small or large groups of professionals to work on different things from team building to problem solving to a wide variety of situations that come up in an office environment.

McIntosh's corporate side of her business is called, Equine Facilitated Professional Development.

"This is a hands-on approach to professional development which supports goals and initiatives in a non-threatening environment. Rather than just talking about topics or concerns, participants explore them experientially with specially trained horses," she said. McIntosh has worked hard at coming up with different types of programs to teach different types of communication skills which can then be translated back into the office setting. An example that McIntosh gets to a group of corporate professionals to do to increase communication is; three or four individuals go into a pen with a horse and have to try to get the horse to do different things; the trick to this is that no one in the group can talk, the horse doesn't have a halter on, and everyone in the group has been told to do different things yet everyone thinks they have all been told the same thing.

"A specifically designed Equine Facilitated Professional Development exercise which challenges the team to work through changing parameters and uncertainties may help that team identify, explore and find appropriate ways to address those feelings and behaviors (in real-life settings)," McIntosh said. McIntosh says her goal is to teach individuals, families, and corporate ground skills which they can take back with them and put to work to better the lives of everyone, including their own.

Whether they are going back into a marriage or going back into a work place I want them to take the skills they learn here and use them. This is probably the biggest challenge, trying to figure out how to use the skills they learned out here in real life," she said.

McIntosh chose to open her business up, just north of Cremona - off of Highway 22 because it offered the perfect location.

This is right in the middle of both Calgary and Red Deer which is where a lot of my clients comes from," she said. "And, I needed the setting to match the work that I was doing." If you are interested in contacting Healing Hooves you can call Sue McIntosh at 637-2053 or by email at sue@jeffmcintosh.com.

Focus on the Family

QUESTION: My wife has been involved in an affair with her boss for six months. I've known about it from the beginning, but just haven't been able to confront her. Melanie acts like she doesn't love me anyway. If I give her an ultimatum I could lose her completely. Can you assure me that won't happen? Have you ever offered the "love must be tough" advice and had it backfire, ending in divorce?

DR. DOBSON: Yes, I have, and I certainly understand your caution. I wish I could guarantee how Melanie will react to a firmer approach. Unfortunately, life offers few certainties, even when all the probabilities point in one direction. Sometimes well-conditioned athletes drop dead from heart attacks. Some outstanding parents raise children who rebel and become drug addicts. Some of the most intelligent, cautious businessmen foolishly bankrupt themselves. Life is like that.

Things happen every day that shouldn't have occurred. Nevertheless, we should go with the best information available to us. I saw a sign that said, "The fastest horses don't always win, but you should still bet on them." Even as a nongambler, that makes sense to me.

Having offered that disclaimer, let me say that there is nothing risky about treating oneself with greater respect, exhibiting confidence and poise, pulling backward and releasing the door on the romantic trap.

The positive benefits of that approach are often immediate and dramatic. Self-respect expressed in a loving way virtually never fails to have a salutary effect on a drifting lover, unless there is not the tiniest spark left to fan. Thus, in instances when opening the cage door results in a spouse's sudden departure, the relationship was over already. I'm reminded of the proverb that says, "If you love something, set it free. If it comes back to you, it's yours. If it doesn't come back, it never was yours in the first place." There is a great truth in that, and it applies to your relationship with your wife.

Now, obviously, it is risky to precipitate a period of crisis. When explosive individuals are involved in mid-life turmoil or a passionate fling with a new lover, great tact and wisdom are required to know when and how to respond. That's why professional counsel is vital before, during and after the confrontation. It would be unthinkable of me to recommend that victims of affairs indiscriminately pose ultimatums with 24-hour deadlines, or that they push an independent partner in a corner. Great caution is needed in such delicate conflicts.

In short, I suggest that you seek the assistance of a competent counselor who can help you deal with the problem of Melanie's affair.

QUESTION: Children seem to be growing up at a younger age today than in the past. Is this true, and if so, what accounts for their faster development?

DR. DOBSON: Yes, it is true. Statistical records indicate that our children are growing taller today than in the past, probably resulting from better nutrition, medicine, exercise, rest and recreation. And this more ideal physical environment has apparently caused sexual maturity to occur at younger and younger ages.

It is thought that puberty in a particular child is triggered when he or she reaches a certain level of growth; therefore, when environmental and general health factors propel a youngster upward at a faster rate, sexual maturation occurs earlier.

For example, in 1850, the average age of menarche (first menstruation) in Norwegian girls was 17.0 years of age; in 1950, it was 13.0. The average age of puberty in females had dropped four years in one century. In the United States the average age of the menarche dropped from 16.5 in 1840 to 12.9 in 1950. More recent figures indicate that it now occurs on average at 12.8 years of age! Thus, the trends toward younger dating and sexual awareness are a result, at least in part, of this "fast track" mechanism.
